Anyone For A Buggy Ride?

PURITAN PULPIT

In the day in which we live obedience is a word and act that is greatly disregarded. It is looked upon with scorn and hatred. This is very evident when we read the morning newspaper. Lawlessness seems to be the thing of the hour. We are now reaping the fruits of neglect in rearing our children up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Obedience must be taught, exemplified and demanded. Christ in order to restore the disobedient became obedient unto death even the death of the cross, that those who renounce their sin and turn from it to Christ will be cleansed.

A brief definition of obedience would be that it is the performance of the commands of a superior. The obligation we are under to be obedient comes from our relation to God as creatures, Ps. 95:6; from God's law revealed to us in His Word, Ps. 119:3, II Pet. 1:5,7; from God's providences which we receive daily, Acts 14:17; Ps. 145; from God's goodness and love in redemption, I Cor. 6:20.

Now let's look into the nature of this obedience. It must be an active obedience of avoiding what is prohibited and performing what is commanded, Col. 3:8,10. It must be personal obedience for though Christ has obeyed the law for us as a covenant of works, yet He has not annuled it as a rule of life, Rom. 7:22; 3:31. It must be a sincere obedience, Ps. 51:6; I Tim. 5. It must be an affectionate obedience springing from love, and not from terror, I John 5:19; 2:5; II Cor. 5:14 15. It must be a diligent and not a slothful obedience, Ga. 1:16; Ps. 18:44; Rom. 12:11. It must be a conspicuous and open obedience, Phil. 1:15; Matt. 5:16. It must be a universal obedience and not one duty, but all must be performed, II Pet. 1:5,10. It must be perpetual obedience, at all times, places and occasions, Rom. 2:7; Gal. 6:9.

What are the advantages of this obedience? It adorns the gospel as seen in Titus 2:10. It is an evidence of one having grace, II Cor. 5:17. It rejoices the hearts of the ministers and people of God. I Jn. 2; II Thess. 1:19,20. It silences the gainsayers, II Pet. 1:11,12. It encourages the saints and reproves the lukewarm, Matt. 56:16. It brings peace to the subject of it. Ps. 25:12,13; Acts 24:16. It powerfully recommends the gospel as that which is both saving and practical, Col. 1:10. It is the forerunner and evidence of eternal glory, Rom. 6:22; Rev. 22:14.

Are you an obedient child of God? Are you even a child of God? Those who are in the habit of being disobedient to the commands of God are not His children.

Homemaker Hints

MILK STORAGE

Occasional flavor and spoilage problems of milk may result mainly from two improper refrigeration methods, temperatures above 40 degrees and light exposure.

"Good shelf life depends on proper handling by stores and consumers."

However, milk not refrigerated properly in transit, milk not immediately refrigerated upon arrival at the store and milk not packed properly are steps to be corrected by processors and retailers to insure freshness before putting milk on the shelf.

A Connecticut survey of 1,126 samples of milk showed that 18.4 per cent of the samples were over 45 degrees F. More than 53 percent were at the borderline and 28.6 per cent were below 40 degrees.

Every other day milk collection at the farm, reduced processing schedules, and less frequent delivery to homes and retailers are factors which extend the time lapse between farm and consumer to more than one week.

In addition, changing consumer buying habits add as much as another week prior to consumption when the mild supply is purchased on a weekly basis. If the milk is not rotated properly at the store, that also can be a contributing factor to poor quality taste.

Ultimate shelf life is determined by the storage temperature. An increase in storage temperature of 5 degrees cuts shelf life in half. Therefore, it is important to cool products to a temperature of 33 to 34 degrees and to keep the temperature below 40 until consumed.

It has been noted that artificial light, as well as daylight, damage the vitamins and flavor of mild. "Exposure to light can destroy varying amounts of riboflavin, vitamin A, and vitamin C."

The intensity of light, distance from light, and type of container have an effect upon the flavor of milk. Milk should be kept out of the sun after buying it at the store. Twenty minutes exposure to light may cause a tallowy taste. Take milk directly home after buying to prevent off-flavor development and bacterial spoilage.

Milk should be returned to the refrigerator after pouring and should not be returned from a serving container to the original container. For maximum shelf life, place the container on the table and pour directly.

Because many refrigerators are in the 50 to 50 degree range, recheck your refrigerator to make sure it is below 40 degree but above freezing (32 degrees). To prevent absorption of other food odors, keep the milk container and those containing other foods closed.

"Of the ten days or more after processing in which milk will keep, if properly handled, two days may elapse before it gets to your home. Milk bought at the store may be about five days old, so do not expect to keep milk in your refrigerator for more than three to five days, especially if the temperature is above 40 degrees.

Flavor at the time of consumption is the true test of quality.
